ABSTRACT

Over 500 books, monographs, and periodical articles dealing with program evaluation are indexed in this bibliography. The references are presented in the form of a modified Key Word in Context (KWIC) System. This system selects the key words in all titles and presents them in an alphabetical listing which refers the user to another alphabetical listing by author where the complete bibliographic data can be found. The subject areas covered in this bibliography include general references on program evaluation in government and education found in readily available literature in these fields. Literature relating to methodology, education, and case studies are specifically identified. Major topics referred to include community action, manpower training, planning, vocational rehabilitation, and others. (Author)

PREFACE

Program evaluation, as a field of interest, has developed tremendously in the past few years. Such a development is usually accompanied by a burgeoning of published materials in many different disciplines and specialties as individuals wrestle with the problems of performing the activities--in this case doing program evaluation. Those who are assigned to evaluations or other related jobs search for help in the published literature but materials are so dispersed that many sources of information are not obtained.

The objective of this bibliography is to make available in one place a listing of materials on program evaluations that will help solve the problem of finding relevant information on program evaluations. Like any first attempt at something, this bibliography has its weaknesses. We hope to overcome these weaknesses in future issues and that those using the Bibliography will let us know where they think we can improve it.

Many individuals and institutions contribute to a project like this. The project is the direct result of Sangamon State University's mandate as the public affairs university of the State of Illinois where the Public Sector Program Evaluation Center is one of the formal means of expressing that interest through activities of this nature. Throughout the University a number of individuals contributed time and effort to the extent that they should be recognized and thanked. Dr. Donald S. Klett, Associate Professor of Quantitative Sciences, helped tremendously in the complex process of modifying the KWIC computer program and getting the critical computer output. Frank Thomalla, Graphic Arts Designer, designed the cover. And, finally, Camilla Reimer gave the needed typing and secretarial assistance.

USING THE BIBLIOGRAPHY INDEX*

This bibliography employs the computer Keyword-In-Context (KWIC) index program for information on program evaluation and related areas. The references included here are presented in two alphabetical listings:

(1) "Keyword-In-Context (KWIC) index to titles and

(2) Bibliography of references by author.

THE KWIC INDEX

The blue section of this publication composes the KWIC Index which lists each reference under the keywords of its title. The computer was programmed with a list of stop words to prevent indexing under non-keywords so far as possible. Additions to titles were made for further classifications such as case studies and methodology. These additions are shown in brackets ( ) and are included in the KWIC indexing. The key words are aligned on a particular column so that their alphabetical sequence may be readily observed. For each reference some or all of the other words in the title are shown which immediately precede and/or follow the alphabetized keyword.

To the right of each entry in the KWIC index appears a reference code which directs the user to the proper entry in the bibliographical listing where he will find the complete information on the reference. You may also note the reference code consists of three items which aide in identification of each reference-- a six-letter identification of the author, two numbers for the year of publication, and three letters which are the first three significant words in the title of the reference. (See Figure 1)

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF REFERENCES

The white section following the blue KWIC Index comprises the bibliography which contains the author, title, and publishing information for each reference. Again the reference code is employed for easy cross-listing. The sample bibliography page in figure 3 shows how entries are recorded alphabetically by their reference code and thereby alphabetically by author since the first half of the reference number is made up of the author's last name. (See Figures 2 and 3).

Figure 2. Samples of indexing keywords from one title. These exerpts from the KWIC index refer to one document in common. In each case, the document is listed under a different keyword, but the document always bears the same reference number (DENIOL72RPE). By looking up this code in the Bibliography, the user finds the authors' names, full title, source, volume, and page numbers as shown in Figure 3.
